THE ARRANGEMENTS EFFECTED.

Mauer's Request.

It Is Said That Mauer Will Be Reinstated Simply as an Engineer, and that the Brotherhood are Perfectly Satisfied.

As fully and exclusively reported in yesterday's Times, Fbiilp Mauer, a road foreman on the Chesapeake and Ohio Fallroad, located at Clifton Forge, on railroad, located at Clifton Forge, on Thursday, through counsel, secured an injunction in the Law and Equity Court, restraining certain members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, whom he accused of entertaining feedings of hostility toward him, from holding communication with General Manager George W. Stevens and other managers of the road with a view to securine his discharge.

other managers of the road with a view to securing his discharge.

BILL AND LETTER.

The injunction granted was effective until June 14th, and was allowed by Judge Minor upon a bill setting forth that action projudicial to Mauer's interests was being contemplated by the Brotherhoods mentioned, and also upon a letter, which accompanied the bill, signed by a number of Brotherhood men, which intimated strongly that unless Mauer's services were dispensed with less Mauer's services were dispensed with there would be an outbreak of the men. This letter was addressed to the super-intendent of the division upon which Mauer worked.

After securing the injunction mentioned Mauer's counsel served notice upon all parties interested that they would on Monday, June 13th, move the court for its enlargement.

Yesterday morning, hewever, Mauer held a consultation with his attorneys, and shortly thereafter at their request Judge Minor entered an order dismissing the entire proceedings. Neither Mauer's coursel nor the management of the Chesapeake and Ohio railway would state what arongements had been made which had caused this sudden change of base and abandoument by Mauer's counsel of their plans. It was learned, however, from other sources that a sort of an all-round compromise had been reaheed.

It is stated that the Chesapeake and men, not to reinstate Mauer as road fore-man, but it simply put hits back as locomotive engineer, which place he held before he was promofed to road fore-

It is understood that this arrangement will be antisfactory to the Brotherhoods, as, under i Mauer will not be in command of any of the Brotherhood men. The arrangement is also said to meet the views of Mr. Mauer.

CAUSE OF THE TROUBLE.

CAUSE OF THE TROUBLE.
The trouble between Mauer and the Brotherhoods of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen was put upon the ground that the former lacked mechanical skill.
That, however, serms not to have been the real issue, as Mauer is said to have had twenty years experience and to be a strictly first-class mechanic. He was, it is stated, at one time a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, ugh he does not now affiliate with that discussion, it may be stated that the feel-ing existing between the Chesapeake and Oble management and its employes is of the most cordial character, and it is but seldom that any questions arise which cannot be settled by arbitration. which cannot be settled by arbitration.

Genéral Manager Stevens in an interview yesterday, emphasized the friendly feeling which exists, and declared that it was not at all likely that any serious disagreement would occur.

"It is hard for a trained soldier of the European model to suppress a sentiment akin to contempt when reading the accounts of what have thus far been done, or, rather, left undone by the American army against the Spanish troops in Cuba."

With no Spanish fleet to worry them, money and transports in abundance, all the men needed at their command, they have been unable thus far to even ef-fect a landing of troops. This fact speaks for itself, and after the enormous boasting of the American press, and people who systematically belittled the Sassingtof for months before the outpeople who systematically benthed the Spaniards for months before the out-break of hestilities, this inglorious fail-ure is doubly conspicuous, and, if strik-ing proof of the great superiority of the European system of standing armies was needed, the Americans have furnished

A great laugh followed this prediction from the Missourian.

Mr. Parker (Rep. of New Jersey) was presiding, Mr. Reed occupying temporarily a seat upon the floor. The laughter was renewed when Mr. Clark added, "it is unnecessary to say I prepared that for the regular occupant of the Chair. The House at 4:45 P. M. adjourned.

CAN'T LIVE ON $100 A WEEK. And so She Asks the Court to Increase Her Allowance.

Josephine Louise Rubsam, now 18 years old, has applied to Justice Russell of the Supreme Court of New York, says the Sun, for an increase of her allowance sun, for an increase of her allowance beyond $100 a week, because, she says, she is unable to starve along on that sum, and for the payment of a large number of bills she contracted while stinted to that allowance.

The girl was adopted into the family of Joseph Rubsam, the brewer, of the Rubsam & Horrmann Brewing Company, who died on Oct. 24, 1890. When a year and a half old she was taken into the and a half old she was taken into the family, but she was formally adopted. Joseph's widow, Emily, adopted her in June, 1896, and died not long after. By the will of Rusbam the income of a third of his residuary estate was left to the girl, to be expended in such suma as his trustees should determine until she was of age, when she is to get the principal. The income of her share amounts to $9,000 a year. The surviving trustees under the will are August Horrmann and William K. Leicht. The girl has had the following surviving trustees. following sums for her support since she was in her fourteenth year: 1893, $6,300; was in her fourteenth year: 1893, $6,300; 1894, $3,900; 1895, $3,700. and 1895, $7,000.

The trustees say that "she has been unruly and unwilling to observe the decorum and conventional behavier required of a young lady for several wars, and her conduct caused grief to her adopted mother," and that since the adopted mother's death the girl's manner of living has caused protest from the trustees. In 1894, it is alleged, she attended a school at Wasnington, but the principal would not let her return. She was at the Episcopal School at 6 East Fifty-third street when she was 15, and there, it is alleged, she began a flirtation with a man across the street. The affidavit of Trustee Hormann proceeds: "She succeeded in smuggling the card of her adopted mother into this man's hands and at her suggestion he used the card as a means of getting into the school."

With the close of 1896 it was found that notwithstanding the large allowances made to her she had contracted many bills, and it was determined to cut down her allowances materially. Mr. Horrmann says:
"The young lady had indulged her extravagant tastes in the most reckless manner without the knowledge of the trustees, and it was deemed advisable to pay the bills she had contracted and to pay the bills she had contracted and to notify tradesmen not to give her further credit. It was suggested by the trustees that she live with the relatives of her adopted mother, who could look after her welfare, but she refused to do so, and said they were not fit company for her. It is further alleged:

"Notwithstanding the repeated warnings given the young lady during the fall of 1896 and the winter of 1897 she continued in her extravash mode of living, opening accounts with various dry goods houses and numerous dressmakers. Tifnany's Gorham Manufacturing Company and others."

any's Gorham Manufacturing Company and others."

These tradesmen were notified not to give her credit. She spent part of 1897 at Annie Brown's school, and Trustee Horrmann says he ascertained on inquiry from the principal that she was one of the most extravagant girls that had ever attended the school. Miss Rubsam left the school and refused to return. When she gave up the school in May, 1897, she took a maid and engaged a suite of rooms at a large price at the Hotel Savoy.

The trustees told her they would limit her to 1000 a week at that time, and informed her that she must give a detailed statement of how she spent the money. She wrote back:

"If you think that I am going to lower myself so far es to account for all my money. She wrote back:

"If you think that I am going to lower myself so far as to account for all my expenditures you are greatly mistaken. Send money immediately."

She at first agreed to accept $100. a week but repented next day and told them it would not do. She then engaged a whole floor at 20 West Seventy-second street at $15 a week, Later she moved to 208 West Seventy-second street, where she also had a whole floor, where she still owes the landlady $500. It is alleged that she now owes $3.500, and Mr. Horrmann says the debt must have been incurred since last fall.

Her motion for an increased allowance and to meet these bills was made through Henry Daily, Jr., a lawyer who was appointed her general guardian on April 11 last by Surrogate Arnold, Lawyer Daily says that she has been unable to hire a physician and he has had to send her his own physician. Her manner of life before the death of her adopted mother was on a higher plane, he states, than she can attain with $100 a week; besides,

mr. Horrmann alleges that the Rubsams lived in an unoatentatious way on Staten Island from 1885 until their death, and the girl has not been accustomed to expend money as ahe seeks to do. He further alleges that he believes that Guardian Daily is not a fit and proper person for guardian. He avers that Mr. Daily wrote to Guggenhelmer. Untermyer & Marshall, attorneys for the trustees on March 3 last, asking for $6,500 for the girl for a wedding outfit, as she was to marry, on April 12, a Mr. Glover, who is in the woollen business. They replied that the girl had better write to Mr. Horrmann, and Mr. Daily subsequently wrote that the marriage had been postponed because of the delay in gettlig an answer. Mr. Horrmann states that he understands that she was not engaged to marry Glover, but that it was a scheme to get money for her. Again Mr. Daily wrote that she was not engaged to marry Glover, but that it was a scheme to get money for her. Again Mr. Daily wrote that she was ill and did not have money for medicines or a physician, and he had to send his own physician. The answer was that medicines would be taken out of her allowance subsequently, and that if she requested the trustees would send a physician "so that her counsel need not continue his sacrifices."

On April 16 Mr. Daily wrote to the law firm requesting that all money be paid to him as her general guardian. The answer was a refusal to comply with the request. In denyiny the motion Justice Russell says:

Novel Contract Between Boarder and Laudlady in New York.

Mrs. Wilhelmina Schmitt, through her attorneys, Messrs. Lewis W. Thomas and Goodwin, Westmoreland & Hallman, has filed a petition in the superior court of Atlanta, says the Journal, in which she makes highly sensational charges against J. T. Schneider.

Mrs. Schmitt sues for half of Schneid-Mrs. Schmitt sues for hair of Schmeider's property and the following are made parties defendant: The Maddox-Rucker Banking company, with which Schmeider is alleged to have about $1,000 on deposit; the Citizen's Loan and Building company the Citizen's Loan and Building Company, in which he is said to have $1,200 worth of stock, and Mattlé O. Davis, W. H. George, S. M. Born and Mary E. Thompson, each of whom is alleged to have borrowed several hundred dollars from Schneider.

Judge John S. Chandler has granted a temporary restraining order preventing any of the defendants from paying Schneider any money due him pending the hearing, and Schneider has been rethe hearing, and Schneider has been restrained from altering the status of his property.

Mrs. Schmitt's petition recites that in 1878 she lived in New York, apart from her husband. She kept a boarding house and Schneider was a boarder. Schneider was living apart from his wife, but showed Mrs. Schmitt a document which he said was a decree of divorce. Schneider became infatuated with his landlady and Mrs. Schmitt fell in love with her boarder. It was a case of mutual affection.

According to the petition a contract was made by which Mrs. Schmitt was to keep house for Schneider till she got a divorce, or her husband died. Then they divorce, or her husband died. Then they were to marry.

A few months after coming to this understanding they moved to Cincinnati. Onlo. Mrs. Schmitt kept house and cared for Schneider's children, at the same time working as a professional nurse and earning considerable money, which she gave to him. Schneider worked as a painter and frescoer.

In 1883 John Schmitt, the husband, died. Schneider said no marriage ceremony.

In 1883 John Schmidt, the navalage ceremony was needed in Ohio, and that a formal declaration on the part of a man and woman that they would live together constituted a legal union, From that time until last November they lived together as man and wife, moving in the secretion to Georgia.

gether as man and wife, moving in the meantime to Georgia.

Mrs. Schmitt was informed last fall that under the laws of Georgia she was not married, and insisted that the ceremony be performed. Upon his refueal she returned to Cincinnati, but came back to Atlanta recently, she claims, at the request of Schneider. When told that she would not live with him again unless he would marry her, Schneider is said to have told her that he had never been divorced from his first wife, who was still living.

Mrs, Schitt alleges that Schneider's property was acquired through their joint eavings, and she seeks to recover one-half of it. His estate is estimated to be worth about $7,500.
